A Global Education

In 1999, St. George's University launched the School of Veterinary Medicine, building upon the more than 20 years of experience in delivering high-quality medical education in an international setting. In 2011, the American Veterinary Medical Association Council on Education (AVMA COE) accredited the school's Doctor of Veterinary Medicine degree. Now, SGU looks forward to sharing these same advantages with veterinary medical students, because at St. George's University, a student's success is the first priority.
