The final year of the Doctor of Veterinary Medicine program is delivered at affiliated veterinary medical schools in the United States, the United Kingdom, Canada, Ireland, and Australia. At these affiliated universities, listed below, students will complete 48 weeks of clinical training alongside veterinary medical students currently enrolled at these universities.

Upon successful completion of the final year, students graduate from St. George's University School of Veterinary Medicine. While St. George's University School of Veterinary Medicine will do everything possible to give students their preference of a final year seat, we cannot guarantee placement in any particular affiliated university.
