

Modular Course Examination

Modular Course Examinations are usually Written Examinations testing the material covered by learning objectives of the respective course segment (usually a module, or part of a module) preceding the examination, either from the start of the course for the first course examination, or from the day after the prior course examination. Typically, a question tests content covered in the respective course segment, which does not exclude may include reference to knowledge and understanding from preceding course segments or courses.