

VSCI 301 : Introduction to Veterinary Science and Medicine

This course is for students in the third year of the preveterinary medical program and focuses on topics such as applied animal nutrition, health, and welfare. In addition, students are introduced to principles of animal handling, including restraint, and discuss case histories and physiological aspects associated with the practice of veterinary medicine.

Core Course

Credits 2