

BUSI 873 : Ethics & Health Management

With leadership comes responsibility and a duty to 'do the right thing' using and awareness of one's own and others' ethical viewpoints. This course explores the numerous ethical duties faced by organizations and managers. Utilizing analytical frameworks and the latest findings on human behavior, participants will explore a wide range of ethical decisions and strategies - many with paradoxical and conflicting perspectives. These will help reveal and assess participants' ethical intuitions, assumptions and frameworks, compare them within explicit modes of formal ethical thought, and learn how to use ethics in business scenarios.
