

BUSI 301 : Organizational Behavior

This course will sensitize students to major issues and principles in the study of work organizations. Topics covered include the interactions between people and groups; different ways the organization can be effectively structured; and the relationship between the organization and its environment. The course also focuses on the leadership-authority system and a study of environmental determinants of organizational structure.

Core Course