

ENGL 336 : Foundations for Medical Commun

Foundations for Medical Communication is a task-based course that builds on the skills developed in the Foundations for Communication course and is intended to provide multilingual students with foundations for the medical communication necessary for success in their academic pursuits at SGU and beyond. In this course, students will continue to practice the foundational skills necessary for medical communication. These skills include the development of the macro language skills (reading, Writing, Listening and speaking) as well as micro communication skills, critical thinking, and cultural awareness.
