

BUSI 876 : Healthcare HR Management

in today's service and knowledge era, people have become the most critical resource in organizations, in both emerging and advanced economics. Human Resource Management (HRM) includes developing individual talent as well as the organizational capability to create future leaders and sustainable, long term success and to achieve better outcomes from and access to health care around the world as well as improved health care models. This course will help you to gain critical knowledge for creating value through people, addressing topics such as critiquing and reinventing existing HRM systems; recruiting, hiring and developing talent; developing managers and leaders; organizational practices; managing talent and performance; information and decision making tools; and managing change.

Core Course